

All Men are Created Equal IV

The question is has this statement that “All Men are Created Equal” meet the exceptions of the signers today? Although this is a hard question to answer, it does become relevant with all of the ups and downs in our environment. But, since an offspring from any background, race, and physical and/or mental health issue can succeed, it is deflected but not yielded, since there are those with feelings that they cannot get out of their current environment.

As the signers predicted, anyone can succeed from birth, although some people will have more of a struggle. But, to complicate things, there are special interest groups, individualism, laws that prohibit people from succeeding. It is kind of like the free market, there are items and laws prohibiting “we the people” that are deterrent to society.

Today, the special interest groups that are will prevent an equal society. The groups can originate from sexual, political, to race. If you listen to the media today, you will find out the homosexuals are the greatest people in the world, despite the fact that most of them are suffering from mental trauma from their childhood. There is a political party that hates capitalism and is doing anything possible to switch to socialism. As seen with the coronavirus, there were governors that controlled every breathe that their citizens made. (So much of the home of the free and brave.) People of color are regarded as the greatest people to ever walk the face of the earth, and should never be considered as equal to the white race with the month of February designated to them. There are those that believe that women are the dominate species, since they are more physical, rational, and intelligent that the males. To prove this point, Gloria Steinmen has always stated the men are scum of the earth (I do not understand our species is to exist without the semen from males, but she does have it figured out). There is definitely a movement to remove all males for the military forces. It becomes obvious that people in these groups will never see the world as “we the people.”

We see individualism everywhere today. Unlike when I was growing up, once someone dress up in the current fad, it was not long and everyone was dressing up the same way. But, as people dress today, they dress not to look like everyone else. Furthermore, the current craze for tattoos really marks everyone as being different. With no-one wanting to be the same, it does lead to independence. Therefore, if some does not fit in, they may take in actions toward our society, as well publicized in the news everyday.

The American citizens have pulled together at times of needs. As my grandmother use to talk about the depression, the dairy framers would stop on their way to town to see if they could pick items up for them, since everyone had to conserve their expenses. After 911, we saw the American citizen become scared, everyone was not certain that there would be more attacks on this country, and everyone comforted each other. Unfortunately, it has been stated that this country has become so diverse that it is not certain that this country can pull itself together during a time of crises.

As written in the preamble to the US Constitution, the founding fathers were expecting the citizen to come together by making the statement, "we the people." And for the most part, this country has come together. But as Thomas Jefferson stated after Shay's rebellion, a little protest is a good thing, since it does point out issues that needs to be addressed. But, a little protest is fine, but not a protest or a major protest. As we felt about the riots growing up in the 1960s, the rioters were as militant as the military forces in the Soviet Union.

It comes down to the point that evil exists everywhere, but it is had to contain evil. And, evil can be difficult to get around. It is like the years of combat that it took to eliminate the Hitler regime.

Therefore, for the phase "All Men are Created Equal" succeed, it is best for it to be implemented without any restriction. As for our society to function the best, this phase must exceed without any deflection.
